It rather surprises New York audiences nowadays to be confronted by good acting—such unusually fine acting Fifth Couple Figuring in Duke as Mr. Sills exhibited yesterday after-noon, which was the second performance of the play. It, moreover, rather irri-

Ernest Truex contributed another excellently studied sketch of a boy, although there are grounds for the distressing impression that Mr. Truex is not quite so boyish as he used to be. But he still has years of boyhood before him when he acts with as much spontaneity as he did yesterday. Master Macomber was the more youthful delinquent and played sympathetically. Gladys Wynne struggled with rather an artificial role as the mother of the erring youth.

The betrothal of Miss Eisa Reath and John Appleton was a fact even before the engagement of Miss Cordella Biddle and young Duke was announced, even as that of Miss Hope Beal and Oliver Cromwell.

Of the three engagements that followed, the first to be announced was that of Miss Mary Duke, a sister of the bridegroom, and Anthony J. Drexel Biddle. Jr. Miss Ellen Yuille and William Sturgis, both of New York, announced their betrothal afterward. Now comes that of Miss Coxe and Mr. Stokes.

Plainfield Audience.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 14.—Grace George, with her Playhouse company, presented "The New York Idea" here to-night prior to the formal opening of her season of repertoire productions at the Playhouse, New York, beginning next Tuesday evening. This play, which was shown for a short time a few seasons ago, was regarded as one of the best American comedies ever made known, and it appears to have lost none of its attractive qualities in the interval.

Miss George was recalled again and again at the end of each act. Prominent in her company effecting a praise-worthy general result, were Mary Nash, Josephine Lovett, Norah Lamison, Eu-Plainfield Audience.

of the play. It, moreover, rather irritates the theatregoers of this city to encounter such a fine example of histrionism. They realize that they ought to have more of it in the theatre and are peeved that they do not. So there was the most generous applause for what Mr. Sills contributed to the play.

There was another very well acted study of an honest Irishwoman with a weakness for spirits which was most amusingly played by Mattie Ferguson.
